SECTION A: COMPREHENSION

QUESTION 1

Read the text below from the CITY PRESS newspaper of August 2011 and then answer the questions that follow.

WHAT ARE YOU MOST SCARED OF?

We all can get a fright or be scared of animals. It could be a vicious looking dog that is wandering in the street or a cockroach that jumps out of a cup just when we want to make tea. These make our throats go dry and our hearts start beating quickly, or we jump back with our skin feeling like it is crawling and dirty …

We all are a bit scared of spiders and bugs – especially when they jump on us but the National Geographic film crew have to deal with the big monsters. The most dangerous animals in the world.

When the National Geographic crew filmed alligators in the swampy wetlands of the southern parts of the USA, they are right in feeling scared of those big monster reptiles hidden in the murky water.

While filming alligators at Billie Swamp Safari in Florida, the crew got a little too close, and huge alligator pulled the new underwater camera from their grasp, nearly taking it to the bottom of the swamp. It was later found mostly undamaged except for scratch marks from a large alligator.

American bees are much more tame than African bees so, when African bees were introduced into the USA, people quickly named them killer bees because African bees are much more aggressive than the local bees.

When beekeeper Reed Booth invited the team to film wild “killer beehive” extraction, the sound and cameraman had to wear fully sealed bee suits in 34 °C weather.

But, although bees are dangerous the crew was fully protected but when the bees swarmed angrily, even wearing all that thick protection didn’t stop the two crew members from getting scared because all it takes is one small opening for the bees to get inside!

When the crew went to the opposite end of the USA to the state of Montana where the grizzly bears live … the crew had been warned of recent bear attacks and they were scared – bears are meat eaters and some stand almost three metres tall and can kill you with one swipe of their claws!

The crew was very nervous because grizzlies suddenly attack with little provocation – as happened at their camp site very recently.

Jules Sylvester is a brave spider expert who helped the film crew film the Chilean Rose-Hair Tarantula for the episode on spiders – and the bigger spiders get, the scarier they are.

Jules had to get a spider out of its hole and get it to pose for cameraman Chris Towey. But Chris has a terrible fear of spiders – when he sees one he feels like he is going to die!

And tarantulas are as big as your hand like baboon spiders!

How would you like one of those jumping on your FACE?
