Boesman: Bonfire!

Lena: He helped drag what was left of the pondoks …

Boesman: Of course. Full of disease. That one in uniform told me, “Dankie, baas!”

Lena: Just like that.

Boesman: [violently] Yes! Dankie baas.
You should have said it too, sitting there with your sad story.
Whiteman was doing us a favour. You should have helped him. He wasn’t just burning pondoks. They alone can’t stink like that. Or burn like that.
There was something else in that fire, something rotten. Us! Our sad stories, our smells, our world! And it burnt, boeta! It burnt. I watched that too.
The end was a pile of ashes. And quiet.
Then … ‘Here!’ … then I went back to the place where our pondok had been. It was gone! You understand that? Gone! I wanted to call you and show you. There where we crawled in and out like baboons, where we used to sit like them and eat, our heads between our knees, our fingers in the pot, hiding away so that the others won’t see our food …
I could stand there! There was room for me to stand straight. You know what that is? Listen now. I’m going to use a word. Freedom! Ja, I’ve heard them talk it. Freedom! That’s what the whiteman gave us. I’ve got my feelings too, sister. It was a big one I had when I stood there. That’s why I laughed, why I was happy. When we picked up our things and started to walk I wanted to sing. It was Freedom!

Lena: You still got it, ou ding?
