TEXT ADRUG ABUSE RIFE AMONG YOUTH

- 1 With substance abuse on the rise in the Eastern Cape, the South African National Council on Drug Dependence and Alcohol (SANCA) will roll-out awareness and anti-drug campaigns. The campaigns will coincide with Drug Awareness Week which starts today.
- 2 Statistics from United Nations world drug report in 2014 revealed that drug abuse in South Africa is twice above global average with the average age of drug dependency in the country being from 12 years upwards.
- 3 In an interview, Eastern Cape Sanca director Roger Weimann said there had been a rise in the number of youth abusing drugs in the province. Most youths are using mandrax, tik (methamphetamine), crack cocaine and over-the-counter and prescription medication, he said.
- 4 Ginsberg-born Mongezi Sikiti, 34, said he was first introduced to drugs in his teenage years which led to an addiction that lasted more than 10 years. "I began with weed. My peers were also into drugs. I didn't know that it was opening a gateway to even bigger addictions".
- 5 Sikiti was sharing his life-story to a group of teenagers and young people gathered at Steve Biko Centre on Thursday for a dialogue on youth substance abuse and its impact in King William's Town.
- 6 Poverty, unemployment, and broken family structures were identified as the most common factors that fuel substance abuse. The province, however, remains under-resourced in providing help for battling addicts. Currently Sanca East London is the only facility in the central Eastern Cape, apart from a state unit at Fort England Hospital in Grahamstown.
- 7 Department of Social development spokesman Mzukisi Solani said government's rehabilitation centres included Thembelitsha Rehabilitation Centre, in O.R. Tambo district Sanca East London, Shepherd's Field, Welbedacht and a centre for under 18s in PE.
